The Mishap to His Boat at Providence.

We are indebted to Dan Cochran for a copy of the Providence Star, from which we clip the following paragraphs of interest to our readers, and especially to those interested in the career of Wheeling's champion oarsman, Geo. W. Weigserber:

"It is to be regretted that at certain points on the river there are shoal spots on which are obstructions, which, at low water are barely visible and at other times in the lower stages of the tide are concealed beneath the surface. The spots are in shallow water mear the shore, and do not affect the coarse in the least, but to the oarsman, who in practicing keeps inshore to avoid the flow of the tide or the force of the wind, they are a most treacherous aged boat was the only one the oarsman had, he naturally felt discouraged at the mishap, but on arriving at the boat house he was met by kind words and offers of assistance from the 'Gansetta present, and assistance from the Gransetts present, and Secretary Aborn, who was out in his shell, promptly offered the use of the same to the unfortunate sculler. Weisgerber tried the craft long enough to ascertain that it would carry him nicely, and after out-riggers, slide, etc.. are adjusted to suit the change he will be

The teams to be selected and named when the day of shooting is fixed, with two substitutes.

If you have any one in Philadelphia whom you would like to have represent your club, please refer them to me.

We have no one in Wheeling that we could ask to represent us, but we cherfully leave the matter in your hands, feeling certain of fair play, and that the score to which Prof. Dwight affixes his name will be the correct one. as it holding has a lapton to friends at home met with a hearty response, in the shape of substantial assistance with which to procure a new boat to replace the damaged one. The next thing was to order one already completed, as the short interval before the race occurs, would barely allow time for the construction of a new one. Champion Hanlan, who has manifested a very friendly interest in the Wheelingite, quickly proyed himself a valuable friend and adviser, and at his suggestion, a dispatch was sent to Warring, the Toronto boat builder, asking him to send one of his paper boats, of which the champion said he thought two were on hand all complete. If the new boat arrives in time for him to become accestomed to it, Weisgerber will probably costomed to it, Weisgerber will probabluse it, but the one so kindly tendered b use it, but the one so kindly tendered by Secretary Aborn may suit him so well that a change will be unnecessary. The West Virginian is deeply grateful for the uni-form kindness shown him, and it is earn-estly hoped that no further untoward event will prevent his participation in the contest that he has come so far to take part in.

POISONED BY PARIS GREEN. - Two Chil-Poisoned by Paris Green.—Two Children Felally Affected by its Fumes.—A day or two ago two small children of Mr. James Campsey, who resides out in Washington county, Pa., a short distance over the State line, were sprinkling Paris green on some potato vines to kill the Colorado beetles, or potato bugs. Shortly afterwards they were both inken violently ill, with all the symptoms of arsenical poisoning, and in spite of all efforts to consteract the effects, both died in a few hours. It is supposed by the physicians that the poison was communicated through the subtle fumes of the powder, which they inhaled while using. It is also possible that the effect was caused by absorption though the skin. Both the children were baried in the same coffin. The bereaved parents have the sympathics of the whole community in their double affliction.

Ordinally the opening was ample large to on one date and train and return at an affect the coarse in the least, but to the coarsan, who in practicing keeps inshore to avoid the flow of the tide or the force of the wind, they are a most treacherous enemy. The blow, though but a light one, made two holes in the paper craft, and badly scraped its entire length. The material of which the boat was constructed being elastic, but little water entered the apertures, and by rowing carefully the boat hone was reached in safety.
